STAY-AT-HOMES ARE NOW SCARCE

Mrs. Anthony French Merrill Says They Are Needed to Give the World Its Proper Balance.

A growing necessity for "stay-at-home" idealists was emphasized on Saturday afternoon by Mrs. Anthony French Merrill when before her class in the red room at the Oliver hotel she continued her review of the literature of 1914. The great galaxy of brilliant minds she said, "whose ideals and theories are public property, who are active in the work of the world, creates a burning need for those idealists who keep bright the hearth fire of the world and provide rest and refreshment for the spent workers in the arena of life."

Mrs. Merrill first pointed out that the spirit of action of new thought and new ideals is bringing out a greater number of brilliant minds than have ever been brought out for generations, that more now than ever before there is a consequent need for those "quiet stay at home individuals" who by their silent sympathy, their hidden, tender ministering, balance and encourage the active workers.

The war, she went on to say, is having many silent effects. It is killing many radical schools in the bud. It is also turning into America artists, particularly dramatic managers and producers, who are making it difficult by their very number for stage folk to make a living.

Among the books which Mrs. Merrill scored or commended were, "The Gospel of Beauty" by Nicholas Vachel Lindsay; "Inside the Cup" by Winston Churchill; "Wife of Sir Isaac Harman" by H. K. Wells; "Titan" by Theodore Dreiser; "Clarksfield" by Robert Herrick; "Saturday's Child" by Kathleen Norris; "Three Sisters" by Mae Sinclair; "The Duchess of Rex" by Walpole; "Crock of Gold" by James Stevens; "Her Wings" by Sims; "Pygmalion" by Shaw.

She spoke also of the work of Harriet Munro, James Oppenheim, Grace F. Norton, Macefield, W. W. Gibson, Alfred Noys and Amy Lowell.

PORK PRICE TAKES DROP

Wheat Gained Five Cents During the Past Week.

Radical reduction in the price of hogs was the only change in the local markets reported Saturday. Following the Chicago markets, hog quotations declined from $6.40@6.50 on Friday to $6.15@6.25 Saturday, this being the greatest reduction since Jan. 12, when a 25c drop occurred.

Grains in local markets failed to suffer the slight drop reported at Chicago, wheat, corn, rye and oats remaining firm. What was the only grain fluctuating during the week, this commodity opening at $1.40 Monday, a loss of 15c over the prices at the close of the previous week, climbing to $1.45 on Tuesday and remaining at that figure for the rest of the week.

DEALERS ARE SWINDLED

Clever Pair Get Away With the Coin at Laporte.

LAPORTE, Ind., Feb. 20.—Two men, who gave their names as George Bennett and H. D. Stead, arrived here yesterday and renting one of the best houses in the city on the representation that their families would arrive today, made extensive purchases of furniture and household equipment. Today merchants were busy delivering the goods at the supposed home of the new families. The two men paid for the goods with checks which in each case exceeded the amount of their purchases, the balance being paid them in cash. This morning when the banks opened the checks were found to be worthless. The swindlers departed during the night.
